ACCOUNTABILITY CONCEPTS

THE ACCOUNTABILITY CONCEPTS APPROACH

Classrooms, schools, districts and parents across the United States, who have welcomed the easy to implement Accountability Concepts program, have been astounded by the immediate results and effectiveness. Accountability principles prove beneficial in any one of these settings, with benefits increasing as the principles are applied in multiple environments.

Under the pyramid program, students who demonstrate self control, have a positive attitude, act selflessly and follow the rules of their classroom have the corresponding sections of their pyramid remain in the "up" position. Periodically, and at the discretion of the teacher/administrator/parent, those with their pyramids "up" are rewarded with additional privileges, while those who are missing components of their pyramid watch without being able to participate. The visual nature of the pyramid is a constant reminder of which area the child needs to work on in order to be restored to the ranks of the privileged.

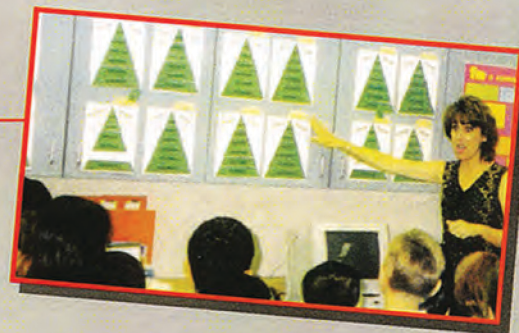

Founding Family

Mr. and Mrs. Pyramid, a.k.a. Matt and Julie Reichmann, developed the pyramid as a system of discipline based on the principles of accountability. Accountability Concepts grew from the success within their own home and encouragement from friends and family who experienced equally successful results using the system.

Educator Endorsement

"The Accountability Concepts program allows parents and teachers to work together to mold the behavior and character skills students need to be successful in school and throughout life. A unique feature is that a parent or a teacher can use the concepts by themselves and notice instant and positive change. Working in partnership it becomes a dynamic plan where no student can escape success!"

- Ralph Baker, Superintendent, Victor Elementary School District.

Educator Endorsement

"Parents and teachers who have attended the training sessions are enthusiastic about the program because it is based on very simple principles and can be put into place quickly. When our parents and teachers come back for the second sessions, you can see the success and feel the confidence the program has created."

- Marie Miller, Principal, Liberty Elementary School

Praise From Parents

"In our home, we have used every system and read every parenting book you can imagine. But nothing compares to Accountability Concepts. It works because it's based
